TEN STERILIZING MACHINES FOR ARMY

NEW YORK, March 11.—Ten sterilizing machines, each weighing 8000 pounds, said to be the largest pieces of disinfecting apparatus ever manufactured, had been prepared for shipment to the American overseas forces yesterday.

By the use of the specially made apparatus it is expected that the danger of trench fever and other diseases among the troops will be reduced to a minimum. The machines not only will sterilize the clothing and effects of the soldiers but will be used for disinfecting surgical dressings.

Though he possesses millions, Harry L. Doherty prefers to live in a tenement district rather than in a Fifth-avenue mansion. He has abandoned his uptown residence to live in an old-fashioned house on the corner of Bridge and Broad-ways, in a tenement district at the tail-end of Manhattan. The inside of the rickety-looking house, however, has been fitted up with all the luxuries and conveniences of a $30,000 a year duplex apartment.
